Guide to Quality Management Systems for the Food Industry Ralph Early, 2012-12-06 Whenever I step into an aeroplane I cannot avoid considering the risks associated with flying Thoughts of mechanical failure pilot error and terrorist action fill my mind I try to reassure myself with statistics which tell me there is greater chance of injury crossing the road The moment the plane takes off I am resigned to my fate placing faith in pilots who are highly qualified and superbly trained for the task of delivering me safely to my destination To be a passenger in an aeroplane is to express faith in the systems used by the airline It is to express a faith in the quality of the airline's organisation and the people who work within it The same is true of surgery Thoughts of mortality are difficult to avoid when facing the surgeon's knife However faith in the surgeon's training and skill faith in the anaesthetist and theatre technicians faith in the efficient resources and quality of the hospital all help to convince that there is little need to worry Apart from flying and surgery there are many facets of life which entail risk but knowing the risks we willingly place our confidence in others to deliver us safely In the consumption of food however few of us consider the risks Everyday if we are fortunate we eat food Food sustains and gives us pleasure Food supports our social interactions selected based on those quality defects most commonly encountered at retail or final inspection level together with less common defects which illustrate a point of particular significance Rare cases of actual spoilage or visible quality deterioration of some shelf stable products are provided to serve as a reference point Particular attention in this respect is paid to exotic imported goods such as Oriental fermented products the nature of which may be unfamiliar to many persons involved in food inspection Covers Technical Aspects of Quality Control The atlas is primarily concerned with the technical aspects of quality control The visual faults illustrated are related to the manufacturing technology involved where possible in order to identify their cause In addition examples of laboratory tests which may be of value in confirming visual diagnoses are included Food poisoning agents microbial or chemical in nature which cannot usually be detected by visual examination and specific problems of a public health nature are also discussed
