Fezzes in the River Sarah D. Shields, 2011-03-16 Self determination imported into the Middle East on the heels of World War I held out the promise of democratic governance to the former territories of the Ottoman Empire The new states that European Great Powers carved out of the multilingual multiethnic and multireligious empire were expected to adhere to new forms of affiliation that emphasized previously unimportant differences In 1936 the new Republic of Turkey lay claim to Antioch and the Sanjak province of Alexandretta which the French had ruled since 1920 as part of its mandate over Syria Turkey s ambassador made a passionate argument that Alexandretta was a homeland of the Turks a place that was essentially Turkish With France and Turkey unable to reach agreement the League of Nations was called in to broker a compromise consistent with the spirit of the new democratic impulse one of many disputes that it had to adjudicate as self determination became a rallying cry for peoples who wanted to form new nations around their collective identities Over the next four years Turkey struggled for recognition of its claims to the territory while Turkish authorities competed to win hearts and minds in Alexandretta province In this nuanced narrative Sarah D Shields illuminates how the people of this region about a quarter of a million Arabs Armenians Circassians Kurds and Turks were forced to choose between Turkish and Arab identities In the end Shields shows national identities played no role in the outcome of the dispute What happened on the ground in this contested region was determined by Great Power diplomacy amidst the crisis of European democracy in the late 1930s a story skillfully interwoven with the violent struggles that took place on the streets of the province In the end a new kind of identity politics was unleashed that redefined belonging transformed nationalism and set in motion the process of dysfunctional democracy that continues to plague the Middle East
