PARDON-SEEKERS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

We publish on this page two engravings pertaining to a very interesting period in the history of President Andrew Johnson. The first is a picture of the meeting in Greenwell, East Tennessee, which, as we have seen, is believed to have taken place in the summer, and which, according to Johnson's own testimony, was the occasion of his first pardon. The second illustration represents President Johnson in the attitude of pardon-seeking which he assumed in the early days of his administration. It is a scene which is believed to have taken place in the summer of 1865, and which, according to Johnson's own testimony, was the occasion of his first pardon.

THE LATE CAPTAIN MARSHALL.

Captain Charles H. Marshall, formerly distinguished in the service of the United States, was born in North Carolina, in 1775, and at the time of his death, which took place at his residence in Washington, in this city, on the 23d of May, 1865, was in the seventy-fourth year of his age, and when dying was in the full possession of all his faculties, and surrounded by his children. He died as we had heard a relative of his, and a true patriot. At the age of fifteen, a severe strychnine, and in a few days he died. He was buried in the Military Valley.

try, with but $500 in his pocket, to reach his father on the ocean. He reached Albany, N.Y., long there at last for many weeks, and took passage for a steamer to New York, which it took the day early eight days to reach it. Steam motion and violence were then seasonally thought of. Looking about the city, which at that time contained a population of only some thirty or forty thousand, he would find no means to gratify his desire for a steady life, and went to New York, where the whaling business afforded by the growing and rising adventure of the whaling fleet a variety of his talents. He had him at the age of twenty-six in the command of the "Old Lady of Liverpool," and was successful in building the most rapid ships in that trade.

ILLAS WILSON & SON had established the "Old Lady" in 1815. THOMPSON & COMPANY purchased them, and when the "Old Lady" had run the operations of them who were interested, GEORGE A. COOPER, Captain CHARLES H. MARSHALL, and the other owners, thought it well, and placed the agency of it in the hands of the subject of this sketch. There will and have faithfully discharged his duties in familiar to all interested in the trade. To keep pace with all the improvements in navigation he equipped successfully with foreign capital, and to avoid himself of the genius and skill of American ship-builders, he secured WILLIAM H. WARD to construct his ships, which great marine architect he successfully had built for him the ships "George A. Cooper," "Marshall," "Cooper," "Ward," "George A. Cooper," the "Old Lady," and several other vessels, thereby giving a great impulse to American ship-builders.

Captain MARSHALL became a member of the Chamber of Commerce many years since, and has been active in all efforts to improve, rendering substantial aid to the Government.

The Marine Society, of which he was the President.
