Canada: A Healthy Understanding TS Murray,J Hagey,D Willms,R Shillington,R Desjardins,2008 In September 2007 the Canadian Council on Learning published Health Literacy in Canada Initial results from the International Adult Literacy and Skills Survey 1 From this report we learned 1 While Canadians have higher levels of health literacy than Americans 60% of adults in Canada lack the capacity to obtain understand and act upon health information and services and to make appropriate health decisions on their own 2 Average health literacy varies significantly by province and territory and between different population sub groups within Canada especially among seniors Canadian adults with less than a high school education perform well below adults with higher levels of education and this gap widens with age 3 Differences in literacy and numeracy skills exert a profound influence on a range of social educational and economic outcomes Differences in average health literacy skill seem to be associated with large differences in perceived general health status The analysis presented in A Healthy Understanding builds on the initial results presented in Health Literacy in Canada An individual's level of health literacy which encompasses education level and ability to learn about health is strongly connected to the health they enjoy Simply put good health literacy skills can lead to good health for the individual and for the population at large

Social Determinants of Health, Fourth Edition Dennis Raphael, 2025-01-06 Now in its fourth edition Dennis Raphael's Social Determinants of Health offers the definitive Canadian discussion of the primary factors that influence the health of Canada's population This unique text on the social determinants of health contains contributions from top academics and high profile experts from across Canada Taking a public policy approach the contributors to this edited collection critically analyze the structural inequalities embedded in our society and the socio economic factors that affect health including income education employment housing food security gender and race This new edition includes recent statistics new developments in early childhood education and the implementation of Canada's national childcare system and new content on the social determinants of Indigenous Peoples health Particular attention is paid to how economic globalization and the acceptance of neoliberal governing ideology is shaping the health of Canadians The COVID 19 epidemic vividly illustrated the importance of the social determinants of health as sickness and death rates were strikingly higher among Canadians in groups already experiencing adverse living and working conditions and poorer health lower income Canadians recent immigrants of colour and those experiencing housing and food insecurity If anything positive is to come out of this experience it will be recognition that in the current post COVID 19 environment it is essential to understand the socio economic conditions that shape the health of individuals and communities Social Determinants of Health Fourth Edition is aimed at courses focusing on the social determinants of health at Canadian universities and colleges particularly those in health studies and nursing but also allied health sociology and human services
