paradigm shift in hearing services Drawing upon the latest research and policy work the book opens up a conceptual framework for a new approach to hearing services and looks at the kinds of personal and systemic changes a paradigm shift would entail

The Role of Working Memory and Executive Function in Communication under Adverse Conditions

Mary Rudner,Carine Signoret,2016-06-20 Communication is vital for social participation However communication often takes place under suboptimal conditions This makes communication harder and less reliable leading at worst to social isolation In order to promote participation it is necessary to understand the mechanisms underlying communication in different situations Human communication is often speech based either oral or written but may also involve gesture either accompanying speech or in the form of sign language For communication to be achieved a signal generated by one person has to be perceived by another person attended to comprehended and responded to This process may be hindered by adverse conditions including factors that may be internal to the sender e g incomplete or idiosyncratic language production occur during transmission e g background noise or signal processing or be internal to the receiver e g poor grasp of the language or sensory impairment The extent to which these factors interact to generate adverse conditions may differ across the lifespan Recent work has shown that successful speech communication under adverse conditions is associated with good cognitive capacity including efficient working memory and executive abilities such as updating and inhibition Further frontoparietal networks associated with working memory and executive function have been shown to be activated to a greater degree when it is harder to achieve speech comprehension To date less work has focused on sign language communication under adverse conditions or the role of gestures accompanying speech communication under adverse conditions It has been proposed that the role of working memory in communication under such conditions is to keep fragments of an incomplete signal in mind updating them as appropriate and inhibiting irrelevant information until an adequate match can be achieved with lexical and semantic representations held in long term memory Recent models of working memory highlight an episodic buffer whose role is the multimodal integration of information from the senses and long term memory It is likely that the episodic buffer plays a key role in communication under adverse conditions The aim of this research topic is to draw together multiple perspectives on communication under adverse conditions including empirical and theoretical approaches This will facilitate a scientific exchange among individual scientists and groups studying different aspects of communication under adverse conditions and or the role of cognition in communication As such this topic belongs firmly within the field of Cognitive Hearing Science Exchange of ideas among scientists with different perspectives on these issues will allow researchers to identify and highlight the way in which different internal and external factors interact to make communication in different modalities more or less successful across the lifespan Such exchange is the forerunner of broader dissemination of results which ultimately may make it possible to take measures to reduce adverse conditions thus facilitating communication Such measures might be implemented in relation to the built environment the design of hearing aids and public awareness

The Aging Auditory System Sandra Gordon-Salant, Robert D. Frisina, Richard R. Fay, Arthur Popper, 2010-05-03 This volume brings together noted scientists who study presbycusis from the perspective of complementary disciplines for a review of the current state of knowledge on the aging auditory system Age related hearing loss ARHL is one of the top three most common chronic health conditions affecting individuals aged 65 years and older The high prevalence of age related hearing loss compels audiologists otolaryngologists and auditory neuroscientists alike to understand the neural genetic and molecular mechanisms underlying this disorder A comprehensive understanding of these factors is needed so that effective prevention intervention and rehabilitative strategies can be developed to ameliorate the myriad of behavioral manifestations

Journal of the Academy of Rehabilitative Audiology ,2001      Adult Cochlear Implant Rehabilitation Karen Pedley, Ellen Giles, Anthony Hogan, 2005 This book provides information and resources to assist in all stages of a client's implant program building on a transdisciplinary model of practice. Aging and Hearing Karen S. Helfer, Edward L. Bartlett, Arthur N. Popper, Richard R. Fay, 2020-10-20 Since the first edition of the Aging Auditory System volume in 2009 there has been a tremendous amount of research in basic translational and clinical sciences related to age related changes in auditory system structure and function. The new research has been driven by technical and conceptual advances in auditory neuroscience at multiple levels ranging from cells to cognition. The chapters in Aging and Hearing Causes and Consequences span a broad range of topics and appeal to a relatively wide audience. Our goal in this volume is to put together state of the art discussions about new developments in aging research that will appeal to a broad audience serving as an important update on the current state of research on the aging auditory system. This update includes not only the recent research but also consideration of how human and animal studies or translational and basic research are working in tandem to advance the field. This new edition is a natural complement to the previous SHAR volume on the aging auditory system edited by Gordon Salant, Frisina, Popper and Fay. The target audience for this volume will be graduate students, researchers and academic faculty from a range of disciplines: psychology, hearing science, audiology, physiology, neuroscience, engineering. It also will appeal to clinical audiologists as well as to researchers working in the hearing device industry. Individuals who attend conferences sponsored by the Association for Research in Otolaryngology, Acoustical Society of America, Auditory Cognitive Neuroscience Society, American Auditory Society, Society for Neuroscience, American Speech Language and Hearing Association and the American Academy of Audiology among others are likely to find value in the volume.

The effect of hearing loss on neural processing Jonathan E. Peelle, Arthur Wingfield, 2015-06-03 Efficient auditory processing requires the rapid integration of transient sensory inputs. This is exemplified in human speech perception in which long stretches of a complex acoustic signal are typically processed accurately and essentially in real time. Spoken language thus presents listeners' auditory systems with a considerable challenge even when acoustic input is clear. However, auditory processing ability is frequently compromised due to congenital or acquired hearing loss or altered through background noise or assistive devices such as cochlear implants. How does loss of sensory fidelity impact neural processing efficiency and health? How does this ultimately influence behavior? This Research Topic explores the neural consequences of hearing loss including basic processing carried out in the auditory periphery computations in subcortical nuclei and primary auditory cortex and higher level cognitive processes such as those involved in human speech perception By pulling together data from a variety of disciplines and perspectives we gain a more complete picture of the acute and chronic consequences of hearing loss for neural functioning
