Pigeons to News Portals David D. Perlmutter, John Maxwell Hamilton, 2007-11 Ever since the invention of the telegraph journalists have sought to remove the barriers of time and space Today we readily accept that reporters can jet quickly to a distant location and broadcast instantly from a satellite connected video enabled cell phone hanging from their belts But now that live news coverage is possible from virtually anywhere is foreign correspondence better And what are the implications of recent changes in journalistic technology for policy makers and their constituents In From Pigeons to News Portals edited by David D Perlmutter and John Maxwell Hamilton scholars and journalists survey probe and demystify the new foreign correspondence that has emerged from rapidly changing media technology These distinguished authors challenge long held beliefs about foreign news coverage not the least of which is whether in our interconnected world such a thing as foreign news even exists anymore Essays explore the ways people have used new media technology from satellites and cell phones to the Internet to affect content delivery modes and amount and style of coverage They examine the ways in which speedy reporting conflicts with in depth reporting the pros and cons of parachute journalism the declining dominance of mainstream media as a source of foreign news and the implications of this new foreign correspondence for foreign policy Entertainment media such as film television and video gaming form worldwide opinions about America often in negative ways Meanwhile live reporting abroad is both a blessing and curse for foreign policy makers Because foreign news is so vital to effective policy making and citizenship we imperil our future by failing to understand the changes technology brings and how we can wrest the best practice out of those changes This provocative volume offers valuable insights and analyses to help us better understand the evolving state of foreign news Psychoanalysis, International Relations, and Diplomacy Vamik D.

Journalism's Roving Eye John Maxwell Hamilton,2011-08-15 In all of journalism nowhere are the stakes higher than in foreign news gathering For media owners it is the most difficult type of reporting to finance for editors the hardest to oversee Correspondents roaming large swaths of the planet must acquire expertise that home based reporters take for granted facility with the local language for instance or an understanding of local cultures Adding further to the challenges they must put news of the world in context for an audience with little experience and often limited interest in foreign affairs a task made all the more daunting because of the consequence to national security In Journalism's Roving Eye John Maxwell Hamilton a historian and former foreign correspondent provides a sweeping and definitive history of American foreign news reporting from its inception to the present day and chronicles the economic and technological advances that have influenced overseas coverage as well as the cavalcade of colorful personalities who shaped readers' perceptions of the world across two centuries From the colonial era when newspaper printers hustled down to wharfs to collect mail and periodicals from incoming ships to the ongoing multimedia press coverage of the Iraq War Hamilton explores journalism's constant and not always successful efforts at dishing the foreign news as James Gordon Bennett put it in the mid nineteenth century to describe his approach in the New York Herald He details the highly partisan coverage of the French Revolution the early emergence of special correspondents and the challenges of organizing their efforts the profound impact of the non yellow press in the run up to the Spanish American War the increasingly sophisticated machinery of propaganda and censorship that surfaced during World War I and the golden age of foreign correspondence during the interwar period when outlets for foreign news swelled and a large number of experienced independent journalists circled the globe From the Nazis' intimidation of reporters to the ways in which American popular opinion shaped coverage of Communist revolution and the Vietnam War Hamilton covers every aspect of delivering foreign news to American doorsteps Along the way Hamilton singles out a fascinating cast of characters among them Victor Lawson the overlooked proprietor of the Chicago Daily News who pioneered the concept of a foreign news service geared to American interests Henry Morton Stanley one of the first reporters to generate news on his own with his 1871 expedition to East Africa to find Livingstone and Jack Belden a forgotten brooding figure who exemplified the best in combat reporting Hamilton details the experiences of correspondents editors owners publishers and network executives as well as the political leaders who made the news and the technicians who invented ways to transmit it Their stories bring the narrative to life in arresting detail and make this an indispensable book for anyone wanting to understand the evolution of foreign news gathering Amid the steep drop in the number of correspondents stationed abroad and the recent decline of the newspaper industry many fear that foreign reporting will soon no longer exist But as Hamilton shows in this magisterial work traditional correspondence survives alongside a new type of reporting Journalism s Roving Eye offers a keen understanding of the vicissitudes in foreign news an understanding imperative to better seeing what lies ahead
