

Of course the major problem facing the industry is the lack of a uniform accounting system. Each firm has its own way of recording and reporting its activities, and this makes it difficult to compare the results of different firms. The industry is currently working on a standard accounting system, but it is still in the early stages of development. The industry is also facing a number of other challenges, including the need for more research and development, and the need for more government support. The industry is currently working on a number of projects to address these challenges, and it is hoped that these efforts will lead to a more successful and sustainable industry in the future.
