

Isolated Dwelling

An isolated dwelling is a settlement containing one or two houses, isolated dwellings are found in remote rural areas and may include outbuildings such as barns, cattle pens and holiday homes. People who live in isolated dwellings need to travel great distances to access goods and services. Sometimes goods can be sent to the place in question by the post. Because of their remoteness, isolated dwellings are generally quite attractive places.

Village

A village is a small settlement with a population of around hundred people. Most villages have a central shop that sells essential items like bread, milk, meat and other everyday items. People living in villages usually travel to work, to school or to visit friends and family in other small settlements. There are limited services and social facilities. Villages are good settlements for those who like rural life and their families.

City

A city is a large settlement with a population of hundreds of thousands of people. Most cities have excellent opportunities, specially shops and shopping centres. Many people choose to live in the city because they can find a high rate of jobs in the city. There are many services like hospitals and schools located near the shopping and business. Cities can be small and big places. The number of jobs in the business sector really gives a city its image and name.

Hamlet

A hamlet is a very small settlement with a population of less than a hundred people. Hamlets do not have any shops or houses. They may have social facilities such as a community hall. People living in hamlets must travel to nearby towns to work, to school or to visit friends and family. There are no services or social facilities available. Hamlets are very poor settlements with very little traffic from one end of the village.

Town

A town is a medium sized settlement with a population of around thousand people. Most towns have excellent opportunities, as well as other facilities such as shops, schools and hospitals. Most people who live in the town also work nearby. Services such as schools and hospitals are present in the town, along with shops facilities such as shopping centre, parks and cinemas. Residential areas of the town are usually built with houses and around the shops and business.

book is the first ever monograph on clustering patterns in prehistoric settlements It not only theoretically explains the difference between natural settlement communities and organizational forms for the first time but also demonstrates the importance of understanding this difference in practical research Based on extensive archaeological data from China and focusing on the evolution of prehistoric settlements and changing social relations the book completely breaks with the globally popular research mode which is based on the assumption that settlement archaeology has nothing to do with prehistoric social organization In terms of research methods the book also abandons the globally popular method of measuring the grade and importance of settlements according to their size and the value of the unearthed objects Instead it focuses on understanding settlements attributes from the combined perspective of the group and individuals On the one hand the book proves that the clustering patterns in prehistoric settlement sites reflect the organizational forms of the time on the other it demonstrates that historical research focusing on the organizational forms of prehistoric societies is closer to the historical reality and of more scientific value The intended readership includes graduates and researchers in the field of archaeology or those who are interested in cultural relics and prehistoric settlements     Detroit After Bankruptcy Joe T.
